Privacy Notice

Attorneys, like other professionals who advise on personal financial matters, are now required by a new federal law, the Gramm-Leach-Bailey Act, to inform our clients of our policies regarding privacy of client information. By providing estate and tax planning services, financial and economic advisory services, and by preparing tax returns, we receive significant personal financial information from our clients. Attorneys have been and continue to be bound by professional standards of confidentiality that are even more stringent than those required by this new law. Therefore, we have, and will in the future, always protect your right to privacy.

Information We Collect

Brown & Brown, P.C. collects nonpublic personal information about you from these sources:

- Information we receive from you, including information on forms that we ask you to complete; and
- Information provided to us by your other advisors, such as accountants, life insurance agents, and investment advisors.

Restricted Disclosure

Brown & Brown, P.C. reveals nonpublic personal information about you only if:

- You request or authorize the disclosure.
- The disclosure is made to help complete a transaction that you initiated.
- The disclosure is permitted or required by law.

Our Internal Policies and Security Procedures to Maintain Your Privacy

We restrict access to nonpublic personal information about you to those employees who need to know the information in order for us to provide legal services to you. We educate our employees about the importance of maintaining client confidentiality and require them to follow our firm policies and the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct. We maintain physical and procedural safeguards to protect the privacy of information about you.

If you have any questions regarding our policy regarding the professional standards of confidentiality and/or the privacy of information you provide to us, please do not hesitate to contact us.
